Mapping provides a means of visualizing the curriculum, and there are several ways to visualize it

For program improvements, outcomes-based mapping is the common method

Outcomes-based mapping provides a visual of how courses in the program align with the program's outcomes

	LO1	LO2	LO3	LO4	LO5	LO6	LO7
ABC101	X			X	X
ABC104		X				X
ABC202	X		X
ABC205					X		X
ABC306		X		X
ABC310	X
ABC408				X		X

Colours & alpha and/or numerical coding indicate the level of development/progression toward a given in each course

Why are we talking about mapping?

Strategic Mandate Agreement (SMA)

- ◇ Agreement between U of T and MAESD
- ◇ Curriculum Mapping is a quality indicator
- ◇ As of 2020 (SMA3), quality indicators will be tied to funding

What's the value for academic units?

- ◇ Establish expectations & priorities for academic courses
- ◇ Organize & analyze curriculum
- ◇ Identify gaps or redundancies in content or skills development across curriculum
- ◇ Highlight high-impact practices

How are we rolling out mapping?

UTQAP

- ◇ New templates for self-study reports for external review
- ◇ Increasingly required for program proposals

Other

How might librarians get involved?

Helping academic units determine development of information literacy skills throughout the curriculum.

- ◇ Provide input on program learning outcomes
- ◇ Identify gaps or redundancies across curriculum
- ◇ Provide input on assessments and teaching & learning activities

U of T's Mapping Software

- ◇ Quickly indicate which program outcomes course(s) supports
- ◇ Add details about course teaching methods and assessments which can be aligned with program outcomes
- ◇ Software produces a complete map along with reports about DLEs, assessments, and teaching methods
